Swedish Report On Red Spy Schools

Much of the testimony in the Col. Stig Wennerstrom spy trial in Stockholm is being kept secret, but a Swedish staff officer, Maj. Per Lindgren, showed no reluctance to tell all about 200 "spy schools" he claims the Soviet Union is operating both inside Russia and in satellite nations. The officer, in an article in the morning paper Svenska Dagbladet, said there was a "university of espionage" on the outskirts of East Berlin. He said an "official U. S. report" told of 121 top spies training there before 1961 to work in the West. The article said the Russians had spent $200 million on just 20 of the 38 schools they supposedly are running.
